

CAVE

In the centre
of a single strip of light,
a caver dangles,
bathed in silence,
where a waterfall once roared.
Beneath the surface,
boulders covered in moss could soften a giant's sleep.
The glow-worms carry their swaying lamps.
Look how patient they are – lighting the way for bats, who fold and unfold their wings like tiny umbrellas,
preparing for a rainstorm
that never arrives.
